Harry L. Davis For Governor

Former Governor Harry L. Davis, of Cleveland, Republican candidate, will be the principal speaker at a rally in the Ceramic theatre at 8 o'clock Friday evening, when he will come here following a whirlwind tour of Columbiana county.

Mr. Davis, who has many personal friends in Columbiana county, has visited virtually every section of Ohio in his campaign to return to the state house, after two years' voluntary retirement. He declined to be a candidate two years ago because he found it would require his whole two-year term to complete the work of his administration. Therefore, he was unwilling to spend the public's time in campaigning.

He left the governor's office with a record of having given Ohio one of the best and most business-like administrations it had ever had. A glance at his achievements is indeed convincing. Here, in short, is the performance of Harry L. Davis' administra-

TODAY

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

(The opinions expressed in this column are strictly nose of Mr. Brisbane and not necessarily in consonance ith the policies of The Review-Tribune).

SCIENCE MAN'S GREATEST FRIEND

The work of the scientists is usually looked ipon as a more or less fanciful occupation, uninteresting to the general public.

But, as a matter of fact, scientific investigation and exploration, which means an understanding of the application of nature's forces, is from the point of view of the masses the most hopeful tihng in our civilization

If we could have seen some years ago a scientific gentleman experimenting with ammonia and other materials for reducing temperatures, we should fave thought that he was amusing himself harmlessly but uselessly. Go down along the shore of the Atlantic and find one of the hard-working colonies of fishermen. They will tell you that formerly they caught their haul of fish and carried it to town. All of the fishermen arrived there together to compete with each other. They all had big supplies of fish at the same time. Then the dealers, having them at their mercy, gave them almost nothing for it, or even ompelled them to throw it overboard. If the catch was small, the price of fish was somewhat better, in spite of the dealers' organization, but the fishermen had little fish to sell.

Now the fisherman points out to you on the shore, a few yards away from his nets, a cold storage plant that belongs to him and his fellows. They catch their fish and find out what price they can get for them before taking them to market. If they are too cheap, they put them in cold storage and wait for the price to go up, that they may be decently paid, and not give all the profit to the dealer.

IT SOLVES MANY PROBLEMS

Science helps the truck farmer near the big cities, if he is up-to-date, and especially if he is lucky enough to live in a neighborhood where cheap telephone rates prevail.

Formerly the truck farmer loaded up his produce and took it to town on the chance of finding a good market. When he got there he was very apt to find that somebody else had brought just what he had brought, and that he was at the mercy of the middleman, always ready to take advantage of the producers' competition among themselves.

Now the truck farmer, before picking his berries or cutting his lettuce or pulling his peas, gets hold of his middleman on the telephone and makes his bargain for a cash sum to be paid the following day for such and such produce. He no longer drives to town to find that he can get nothing for his goods, to haul them back or throw them away.

This improvement, of course, in the condition of the farmer will apply much more widely when the gentemanly thieves in control of the telephone trust shall have been brought to book, and when the telephone shall be made a real benefit to humanity, through government or municipal ownership, instead of a means of extortion.

If we should see a solemn old man in spectacles studying insetes through the microscope or setting one tiny creature to fight another, what should

We should probably smile indulgently and say: He does no one any harm, but, of course, he cannot be of any practical value.

But the scientific students of insect life, so much made fun of in comic papers, are most im-

The boll weevil, for instance, has been destroy ing annually more than $40,000,000 worth of cotton. A certain insect student, Prof. O. F. Cook, has found an ant that will destroy the boll weevil. We make a fuss over a Carnegie or a Rockefell erwho gives away $1,000,000. But here is a bug professor who makes his country a present of more than $40,000, 000 a year-forever-and his name is hardly known.

The cultivation of oranges in southern California was at one time threatened with extinction. A parasite deposited upon the tree a spongy massthe "cottony, cushiony" parasite, it was calledand the life of the tree was destroyed by this mass that was intended as food for the parasite's young affer the hatching of the eggs.

A scientific gentleman discovered that the ordinary red "lady bug," called by wise men "vedolia cardinalis," would destroy the eggs of the arange tree parasite and thus save the tree. That simple discovery, followed by the importation of several colonies of lady bugs, preserved a great and important industry.

Science one day will solve our great practical problems, by adding infinitely to the production of wealth, to the effectiveness of labor, to fertility of the soil (as yet not one-tenth part developed), and to the comfort of humanity in all directions. Avarice, our greatest curse, will disappear when science shall have made it impossible for any willing man to lack the comforts of life.

Science will cure our diseases or stamp them out entirely, plow our fields, make the masses independent of the selfishness of the few.

But do not fear that there will be nothing left undone after science shall have done its work. Science cannot make better men. Men cannot think by machinery or improve in morals by ma-

They will have to work out their own moral and social salvation through their own intelligence. The abolition or porverty and of a majority of the incentives that lead avarice, however, will do away with to evil. Science will make it easier for us to be good men, even if it cannot make us good.

Respect hereafter the wise ones that grind away at science. Follow their doings respectfully in the newspapers. When a Lord Kelvin or a Marconi comes among us, let us try to get as much excited and interested as thought he were a "heavyweight

WHAT'S A COCKTAIL?

Dr. Drysdale, of Cleveland, very able man, tells the American Medical association that taking a cocktail before dinner is bad because it makes men eat too much, and that prevents their growing old. That's true, but it's not the worst of it.

Putting alcohol into an empty stomach, with its delicate lining, is plain idiocy.

Before you swallow a cocktail, especially one made of bootleg gin or whisky-rub a little of it into the corner of your eye. Then you will known what it does to the mucous membrane that lines the inside of your body.

opyright, 1924, by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

By R. T. BULKELEY.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Oct. 23 .- An odor of liquor is pungent on the air in spots in this ancient The chance visitor gets it of a sudden, sniffs and raises his eyes in wonder; but the native plunges ahead, with never a thought for an old, old story. For New London is filled with liquor, contraband stuff, seived in vessels that are forever flitting about the fleet in Block Island's rum row and occasionally making a dash for "the states" with their precious cargo.

Along the gut that separates Block Island and Montauk Point on the far eastern end of Long Island, a federal fleet has put down its chain of vessels and is forever picking up luckless runirunners and bringing them, with crews and cargoes, into port here. The cargoes are stored in the customs house and other structures until the places can hold no more. Then some of the liquor is shifted west to New Haven, into large federal warehouses, to await the disposition of the courts.

Meanwhile the liquor leaks. "Go over to the customs house and open the door and you'll get a jag," the natives tell their guests. Purely out of curiosity the visitors wander to the customs house. On the way they pass other liquor caches, all warming up and exuding the unmistakable odor. Thousands upon thousands of cases of liquor are stored away here. No one knows just how muca. City authorities insist the leaking liquor forms a real fire hazard and have petitioned federal au-thorities to take action. The liquor remains. One day saw stx vessels in a fleet being herded into port by a cutter and a destroyer. Fifty men were marched up to the customs house under armed guard and held there until a federal commissioner could be summoned to give them hearings. One of the captured vessels was a seagoing tug that only two weeks before had been captured, with 1,200 cases of liquor. This time it had an even thousand cases. On its first capture the owners had put up a $10,000 bond and secured its release.

Every once in a while Uncle Sam-advertises an auction of captured vessels and goes to some pains to describe the usefulness of each one to a prospective purchaser. When the auction comes the vessel is usually knocked down for a nominal sum, and in nine cases out of ten, so the records show, the vessel gets back to its original owner.

A NEW LEARNED PROFESSION

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 23 .- A new kind of college degree-B. S. R., or bachelor of shorthand reporting-is about to make its appearance. Co bia university is planning next year to start year course leading up to this degree, and it is derstood that the University of Louisiana is considering a similar plan. Thus another occupation will enter the class of learned professions.

This does not mean that Mable, the beautiful gum-chewing stenographer, will ever be expected to absorb sociology and college English in order to hold her job. Life in the average office will buzz on as usual. The title of shorthand reporter served for a specialized type of stenographer who makes his of her living by reporting court proceed ings and other similar events.

There are only about 5,000 of these professional verbatim reporters in the United States and Canada. In England, where libel laws are stringent and law suits are apt to follow misquoted remarks, many news reporters on the daily papers take down complete speeches and interviews in shorthand. This method has its disadvantages from the news standpoint. In this country the news reporter, who is also a skilled stenographer, is rare.

Our shorthand reporters are mostly men who do nothing else but make exact records of important proceedings. Many are attached regularly to courts. Others, however, are free lances, going from a convention of engineers or surgeons to a business conference, then to a congressional hearing, and then perhaps to a church to report a notable sermon The federal court sand other governmental agencies depend mainly on free lance reporters for their records. Consequently there are a large number of reporters in this city, and their experiences are doubtedly more varied than those of reporters any other city in the country.

Reporting of this sort is about as complex rocess as any one can imagine. The average spee i public speakers is about 150 words a minute. Although the average number of letters to a word, in ordinary speech, is five, the average number of movements of the reporter's pen to a minute is probably about 450, and he is expected to keep this speed all day long, if the occasion demands, and if there is no one to relieve him. Some people speak much more slowly than the average, but others, when in good form, think nothing of running along at 200 words a minute, or even 250.

THERE ARE OTHER TROUBLES And speed is one of the least of the skilled re

porter's troubles. If he is in court, he may be called upon to take down the testimony of a witness who mumbles or lisps, or who containally turns his head away from the reporter's table. The shorthand report of the Daugherty hearing made 7,625 typed pages. The Teapot Dome testimony made 7,424 pages. These may not be the bulkiest hearings in the history of congress, but they rank well up toward a record. To picture the size of the printed volumes they would make it is only necessary to remember that an average novel is only four or five hunded typed pages.

A reporter who takes a bi gcontract of this sort on his hands must have an organized office staff to help him. He records testimony for an hormore and then is relieved by one or more associated This gives him an opportunity to go to his office or to a nearby room and read his notes back into dictaphone. While a typist is writing off the record the stenographer is back taking more notes. The transcribed copy is read and corrected by the reporter and the transcript is either delivered at intervals through the day or immediately after the close of the proceedings.

Reporters find that witnesses and lawyers in courts and speakers at meetings use better English and use more technical language than they did a few decades ago. #### Harry L. Davis For Governor

Former Governor Harry L. Davis, of Cleveland, Republican candidate, will be the principal speaker at a rally in the Ceramic theatre at 8 o'clock Friday evening, when he will come here following a whirlwind tour of Columbiana county.

Mr. Davis, who has many personal friends in Columbiana county, has visited virtually every section of Ohio in his campaign to return to the state house, after two years' voluntary retirement. He declined to be a candidate two years ago because he found it would require his whole two-year term to complete the work of his administration. Therefore, he was unwilling to spend the public's time in campaigning.

He left the governor's office with a record of having given Ohio one of the best and most business-like administrations it had ever had. A glance at his achievements is indeed convincing. Here, in short, is the performance of Harry L. Davis' administra-

Centralized responsibility and systematized state activities along strict business lines.

Go to the Ceramic theatre, Friday evening, to hear the gubernatorial candidate and Dr. Michael F. Ford, a prominent labor leader, who will accompany Mr. Davis. They will cite scores of reasons why East Liverpool electors should support President Calvin Coolidge and the entire Republican state, district and county ticket at the polls on November 4.

(The opinions expressed in this column are strictly those of Mr. Brisbane and not necessarily in consonance with the policies of The Review-Tribune).

SCIENCE MAN'S GREATEST FRIEND

The work of the scientists is usually looked pon as a more or less fanciful occupation, uninteresting to the general public.

But, as a matter of fact, scientific investigation and exploration, which means an understanding of the application of nature's forces, is from the point of view of the masses the most hopeful tihng in our civilization.

If we could have seen some years ago a scientific gentleman experimenting with ammonia and other materials for reducing temperatures, we should fave thought that he was amusing himself harmlessly but uselessly.

Go down along the shore of the Atlantic and find one of the hard-working colonies of fishermen. They will tell you that formerly they caught their haul of fish and carried it to town. All of the fishermen arrived there together to compete with each other. They all had big supplies of fish at the same time. Then the dealers, having them at their mercy, gave them almost nothing for it, or even compelled them to throw it overboard. If the catch was small, the price of fish was somewhat better, in spite of the dealers' organization, but the fisher men had little fish to sell.

Now the fisherman points out to you on the shore, a few yards away from his nets, a cold storage plant that belongs to him and his fellows. They catch their fish and find out what price they can get for them before taking them to market. If they are too cheap, they put them in cold storage and wait for the price to go up, that they may be decently paid, and not give all the profit to the dealer.

IT SOLVES MANY PROBLEMS

Science helps the truck farmer near the big cities, if he is up-to-date, and especially if he is lucky enough to live in a neighborhood where cheap telephone rates prevail.

Formerly the truck farmer loaded up his produce and took it to town on the chance of finding a good market. When he got there he was very ap to find that somebody else had brought just what he had brought, and that he was at the mercy of the middleman, always ready to take advantage of the producers' competition' among themselves.

Now the truck farmer, before picking his berries or cutting his lettuce or pulling his peas, gets hold of his middleman on the telephone and makes his bargain for a cash sum to be paid the following day for such and such produce. He no longer drives to town to find that he can get nothing for his goods, to haul them back or throw them away.

This improvement, of course, in the condition of the farmer will apply much more widely when the gentemanly thieves in control of the telephone trust shall have been brought to book, and when the telephone shall be made a real benefit to humanity, through government or municipal ownership, instead of a means of extortion.

If we should see a solemn old man in spectacles studying insetes through the microscope or setting one tiny creature to fight another, what should

But the scientific students of insect life, so much made fun of in comic papers, are most important workers for good.

The boll weevil, for instance, has been destroy ing annually more than $40,000,000 worth of cotton. A certain insect student, Prof. O. F. Cook, has found an ant that will destroy the boll weevil. We make a fuss over a Carnegie or a Rockefell erwho gives away $1,000,000. But here is a bug professor who makes his country a present of more than $40,000,-000 a year-forever-and his name is hardly known.

The cultivation of oranges in southern California was at one time threatened with extinction. A parasite deposited upon the tree a spongy mass-"cottony, cushiony" parasite, it was calledthe life of the tree was destroyed by this ma that was intended as food for the parasite's young affer the hatching of the eggs.

A scientific gentleman discovered that the ordinary red "lady bug," called by wise men "vedolia cardinalis," would destroy the eggs of the arange tree parasite and thus save the tree. That simple discovery, followed by the importation of several colonies of lady bugs, preserved a great and important industry.

Science one day will solve our great practical problems, by adding infinitely to the production of wealth, to the effectiveness of labor, to fertility of the soil (as yet not one-tenth part developed), and to the comfort of humanity in all directions. Avarice, our greatest curse, will disappear when science shall have made it impossible for any willing man to lack the comforts of life.

Science will cure our diseases or stamp them out entirely, plow our fields, make the masses independent of the selfishness of the few.

But do not fear that there will be nothing left undone after science shall have done its work. Science cannot make better men. Men cannot think by machinery or improve in morals by machinery.

They will have to work out their own moral and social salvation through their own intelligence. The abolition or porverty and of a majority of the incentives that lead avarice, however, will do away with to evil. Science will make it easier for us to be good men, even if it cannot make us good.

Respect hereafter the wise ones that grind away at science. Follow their doings respectfully in the newspapers. When a Lord Kelvin or a Marconi comes among us, let us try to get as much excited and interested as thought he were a "heavyweight champion.

NEWSY GOSSIP OF BIG CITIES

By R. T. BULKELEY.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Oct. 23 .- An odor of liquor is pungent on the air in spots in this ancient The chance visitor gets it of a sudden, sniffs and raises his eyes in wonder; but the native plunges ahead, with never a thought for an old, old story. For New London is filled with liquor, contraband stuff, seived in vessels that are forever flitting about the fleet in Block Island's rum row and occasionally making a dash for "the states" with their precious cargo.

Along the gut that separates Block Island and Point on the far eastern end of Long Island, a federal fleet has put down its chain of vessels and is forever picking up luckless rumrunners and bringing them, with crews and cargoes, into port here. The cargoes are stored in the customs house and other structures until the places can hold no more. Then some of the liquor is shifted west to New Haven, into large federal warehouses, to await the disposition of the courts. Meanwhile the liquor leaks. "Go over to the customs house and open the door and you'll get a jag," the natives tell their guests. Purely out of curiosity the visitors wander to the customs house. On the way they pass other liquor caches, all warming up and exuding the unmistakable odor.

Thousands upon thousands of cases of liquor are stored away here. No one knows just how much. City authorities insist the leaking liquor forms real fire hazard and have thorities to take action. The liquor remains.

One day saw six vessels in a fleet being herded into port by a cutter and a destroyer. Fifty men were marched up to the customs house under armed guard and held there until a federal commissioner could be summoned to give them hearings. One of the captured vessels was a seagoing tug that only two weeks before had been captured, with 1,200 cases of liquor. This time it had an even thousand cases. On its first capture the owners had put up a $10,000 bond and secured its release. Every once in a while Uncle Sam-advertises an auction of captured vessels and goes to some pains to describe the usefulness of each one to a prospective purchaser. When the auction comes the vessel is usually knocked down for a nominal sum, and in nine cases out of ten, so the records show, the vessel gets back to its original owner.

The most agile and hilariously funny eccentric dancer on the American stage is a performer without friends. He lives alone and is never seen in public except to dance. He came to Broadway from the Bowery burlesque halls.

Only his intimates know his plight. At the age of 20 a malignant malady ate away his nose and the nose the public sees is putty. Most people perhaps would have given up a profession where personal appearance means so much.

But this man by his indomitable will and sheer artistry not only graduated from burlesque, but has been starred in his own play on Broadway. So frightful is his disfigurement that he does not even employ a dresser. Members of his company only know bim through rehearsals.

Second avenue, by the way, has a single tree near Thirty-eighth street that seems a grotesque touch in the bubbling tenement life. It sprouts between two old brick buildings and it is one of the sights for the children who live farther east.

A NEW LEARNED PROFESSION

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 23 .- A new kind of college degree-B. S. R., or bachelor of shorthand reporting-is about to make its appearance. Col bia university is planning next year to start year course leading up to this degree, and it is derstood that the University of Louisiana is considering a similar plan. Thus another occupation will enter the class of learned professions

This does not mean that Mable, the beautiful gum-chewing stenographer, will ever be expected to absorb sociology and college English in order to hold her job. Life in the average office will buzz on as usual. The title of shorthand reporter is re-served for a specialized type of stenographer who makes his of her living by reporting court proceed ings and other similar events.

There are only about 5,000 of these professional verbatim reporters in the United States and Canada. In England, where libel laws are stringent and law suits are apt to follow misquoted remarks, many news reporters on the daily papers take down complete speeches and interviews in shorthand. This method has its disadvantages from the news standpoint. In this country the news reporter, who is also a skilled stenographer, is rare.

Our shorthand reporters are mostly men who do nothing else but make exact records of important proceedings. Many are attached regularly to courts. Others, however, are free lances, going from a convention of engineers or surgeons to a business conference, then to a congressional hearing, and then perhaps to a church to report a notable sermon The federal court sand other governmental agencies depend mainly on free lance reporters for their records. Consequently there are a large number of reporters in this city, and their experiences are provided then those of reporters. doubtedly more varied than those of reporter any other city in the country.

Reporting of this sort is about as complex process as any one can imagine. The average spee ! of public speakers is about 150 words a minute. ough the average number of letters to a word, in ordinary speech, is five, the average number of movements of the reporter's pen to a minute is probably about 450, and he is expected to keep this speed all day long, if the occasion demands, and if there is no one to relieve him. Some people speak much more slowly than the average, but others, when in good form, think nothing of running along at 200 words a minute, or even 250.

THERE ARE OTHER TROUBLES

And speed is one of the least of the skilled reporter's troubles. If he is in court, he may be called upon to take down the testimony of a witness who mumbles or lisps, or who containally turns his head away from the reporter's table. The next witness in the case may be a foreigner who struggles with his English, slips off into Italian, repeats himself, and gets so tangled up altogether that the judge can get only a vague idea of his testimony.

The lawyers and the witnesses have opportunity to rehearse their parts in the case, but the reporte is expected to perform impromptu and to juggle into shorthand any language that the others may see fit to spring on the court.

George L. Hart, official reporter of four Republican conventions, and reporter of President Hard ing's famous front porch campaigu, is an authority on the everyday life of a shorthand reporter. "You should all be sending your daily paper to people elsewhere during this campaign," declared Dr. Biederwolf before his Wednesday night sermon. ## Life Is Worth While if old folks are well To be well, avoid chronic constipation.

The laxative for old people is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin

T would be of great benefit to elderly people if they realized that all their complaints are aggravated by constipation, as constipation is a form of congestion that affects the brain, nervous and muscular systems.

Headaches develop, aches and pains become worse, and rheumatism more painful. If you keep your intestines free from poisons you will find yourself happier and without those disorders usually associated with advancing age. It is a mistake for old people to take strong cathartic pills, as they are seldom necessary and their repeated use requires larger and larger doses. Likewise the taking of "candy cathartics" is bad, as many of these contain a coal-tar drug that often causes skin eruptions; and if you have taken salt waters you know how dry and weak you felt afterwards. The fact is elderly people need only a mild, simple laxative. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is gentle in action and free from griping, a vegetable compound of Egyptian senna with pepsin and pleasant-tasting aromatics. Use it awhile and you will soon be able to dispense with medicines of all kinds. More elderly people use Syrup Pepsin

During the two months after the dance, Bud Lee and Judith had seen virtually nothing of each other. When routine duties or a necessary report brought them for a few minutes into each other's society there was a marked constraint upon them. Never had the man lost the stinging sense of his offense against her; never had Judith condescended to be anything but cool and brief with him. While no open reference was made to what was past, still the memory of it must lie in each heart, and though Lee held his eyes level with hers and drank deep of the warm loveliness of her, he told himself angrily that he was beneath her contempt. The chivairy within him, so great and essential a part of the man's nature, was a wounded thing, hurt by his own act. The old feeling of camaraderie which had sprung up between them at times was gone now; they could no longer be "pardners" as they had been that night in the old cabin.

He told himself curtly that he did not regret that; that now it was inevitable that they should be less than strangers since they could not be more than friends. That the girl was ready to forgive him, that she had never been as harsh with him as he was himself, that there was a golden, delicious possibility that she should feel as he did-so had an idea had not come to Bud Lee, horse foreman.

A few days after Marcia's arrival there came to the ranch a letter which was addressed:

"Pollock Hampton, Esq. "General Manager,

"Blue Lake Ranch." It was from Doan, Rockwell & Haight, big stock buyers of Sacramento, submitting an unsolic ited order for a surprisingly large shipment of cattie and horses. The price offered was ridiculously low, even for this season of low figures due to the BARNEY GOOGLE AND SPARK PLUG-Well, Well, You'd Think Barney'd Been Over fact that many overstocked ranches were throwing their beef-cattle and range-horses on the market. So low, in fact, that Judith's first surmise when Hampton brought it to her was that the typist taking the company's dictation had made an error.

Judith tossed the note into the waste-basket, Then she retrieved it to frown at it wonderingly, and, finally, to file it. It began by having for her no significance worthy of speculation. It soon began to puzzle her. Finally, it faintly disturbed her.

There were two points of interest. First: Doan, Rockwell & Haight was the company to which Bayne Trevors, when general manager, had made many sacrifice sale. Because the Blue Lake had knocked down to them before, did they still count confidently upon continued mismanagement? Surely they must know that the management of the ranch had changed, And this brought her to the second point: How did it come about that they had addressed, not her, but Pollock Hampton? Was this

Long ago Judith had told herself that she must keep her two eyes wide open for seeming trifles. In spite of her, though she scoffed at her "nerves," the girl had the uneasy conviction that this offer had been prompted by Trevors; that Trevors, for purposes of his own, had given instructions that the letter be addressed to Hampton; that this was the first sign of a fresh campaign directed against her from the dark; that trouble was again beginning.

Thoughtfully she smoothed out the letter, im-paling it on her file.

Pollock Hampton, Foreman-at-Large, came and went on the ranch, carrying orders, taking always a keen interest in whatever work fell to hand, an interest of a fresh kind, in that it was born of a growing understanding. The men grew to like him; Bud Lee tactfully sought to acquaint him with many ranch matters which would prove of value to him. Carson, however, grown nervous over the new method in stock raising, still in its experimental stage, was given to take any suggestion from Hamp ton in the light of a personal affront.

"D-n him," he growled deep in his throat when Hompton had ridden out with word to shift one of the herds into a fresh pasture, an act on which Carson had already decided, "some day I'll just take him between my thum' an' finger an' anni-hilate him."

The greater bulk of the stock had been steadily shifted higher in the hills. The hogs grazed on the slopes at the north of the Lower End; cattle and horses had been pushed eastward to the little valleys in the mountains about the lake. Even the plateau, where the old cabin stood, was now stocked with Lee's prize string of horses. Then one day Hampton came galloping through the herds of shorthorns, seeking Carson. "Crowd them down to the Lower End again," he shouted above the din. "Cut out the scrawny ones and haze the rest into the pens." Carson's steel-blue eyes snapped, his teeth showed like a dog's.

"Drunk" he sneered. "What's eating you?" "Do as you're told," retorted Hampton hotly. "Those are orders from headquarters and it's up to you to obey them. Get me?" "If ever I do get you, sonny," grunted Carson, "there won't be enough of you left for the dawgs to quarrel over. Orders or no orders, I ain't going to do no such fool thing." Hampton reined his horse in closer, staring trowningly at the old cattleman. The purplish color of rage mounted in Carson's tanned cheeks.

"You'll do what you're told or go get your time," he announced tersely. "We've got an order for five hundred beef cows and we're selling immediately." Carson's jaw dropped.

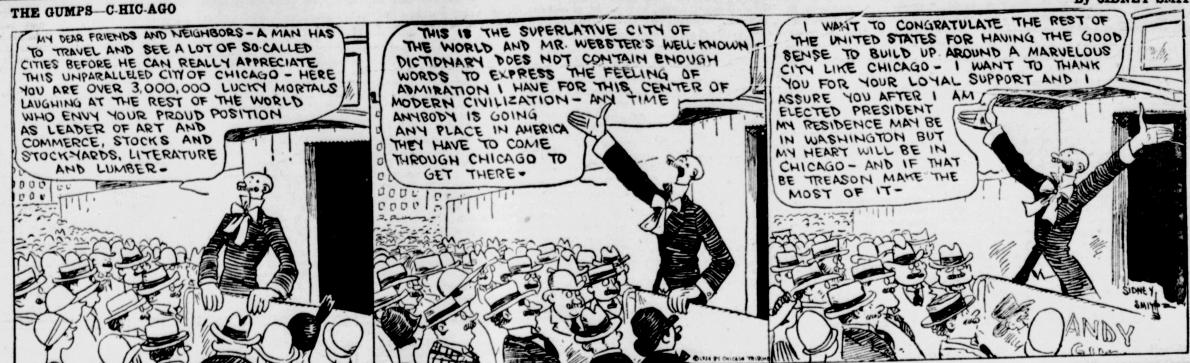

"What?" he demanded, not quite believing his "Say that again, will you?" "I said it once," retorted Hampton. "Now get

"Who are we selling to? I ain't heard about it."

"An oversight, my dear Mr. Carson," laughed Hampton, his own anger risen. "Quite an oversight that you were not consulted. We are selling to Doan, Rockwell & Haight. Ever heard of them?" "Who says we're selling?"

"I say so. And, if you've got to have all the news, Miss Sanford says so." "She does, does she? Hm-m. First I knew of

The fearful thing about this text is that it deals with people who are sining against light. It is a very strange thing to understand how a man who claims anything for himself can admit that he ought to be a Christian and yet tell you it is a thing to which he will give ! his attention at some other time.

It is said of Epimonides that with two fatal javelins in his breast, he inquired for his two great lieutenants and was told they were slain. "Then," he replied. "Nothing remains but to make peace with the enemy." There are people who have treated God that way. When the battle of life has been finished here; when the world has given all it has to offer: when health is gone and death is near, nothing remains but to make peace with God. There are just two things to say concerning such an ac

Will Come Some Time.

It's base enough when one never ntends to turn to God, but is driven to it when one fully intends some day to accept what God has for him in eternity and deliberately delays that decision to indulge in the pleasures of sin for a reason there can be. I think nothing baser or more sinful than that.

But more than this: it is extremely dangerous. The road to hell is paved with good intentions. My brother, you ought to be concerned about your oul and what I fear for you is that if you keep on deferring its interest until a more convenient time, that such time may never come for you, and if you continue to neglect God's invitation, to turn a deaf ear to His entreaties. WOMEN OFTEN THINK THEY HAVE HEART TROUBLE, INDIGESTION, NER-VOUS PROSTRATION, ETC., WHEN IT'S SIMPLY IRON STARVATION OF THE BLOOD.

Many women believe they are weak and nervous as a result of age, worry and overwork; they think that their distrubed digestion, headaches, heart palpitation, shortness of breath, pains across the back, etc., are due to some serious disease instead of the real cause—iron starvation of the blood. This is proven by the fact that when many of these same women take organic iron for awhile all their alarming symptoms quickly disappear and they become strong, robust and healthy. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living cells and tissues. Without it nothing you eat does you the proper amount of good—you do not get the strength out of it.

If you are not strong and well do not wait until you go all to pieces and collapse in a state of nervous prostration, but take some organic iron—Nuxated Iron—at once. But be sure it's organic iron and not metallic iron which people usually take and which is made merely by the action of strong acids on small pieces of iron. Organic NUXATED IRON is like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples and it often increases the bodily and mental vigor

The trouble is, I say we're not concerned. Mother, you're not concerned about your children, the children in whose eyes your own image is reflected, for whose sake you neared the portals of death that they might be born into this world, and if their souls are ever kept out of hell it will be because someone else has taken more interest in their spiritual welfare than you. Wife, you're not con-

Too Little Concern. The trouble is we're not concerned about the things that concern Jesus Christ altho we profess to have His spirit and call ourselves Christians We're willing that souls should be lost, and the cause of Christ go down to defeat if only we can live in com fort and convenience, and comproneed and not the opportunity we lack. A casket containing the body, of a maiden of 19 was carried over the doorstep of a mansion not many weeks ago. The distance to the cemetery was short and the mourners walked slowly and sadly after the carriage containing the relatives. From the gate the casket was borne by six young men to the side of the open grave where it was reverently placed. Saddest of Funerals.

It was the saddest of funerals; she was the most blithesome of girls and as brilliant as gay. She had been ill for some days and delirious from the first seizure until within three con-cious.

The hymn, the prayer, even the benediction, were all mournful as the sounds of the winds on the darkest night at sea. The people stood silent while the grave was slowly filled and then turned to pass away. Suddenly the teacher of her whose body had been lowered into the damp earth, broke forth into the most hysterical weeping. The pastor perceived her grief, went at once to her and said, "Why do you manifest such unusual sorrow.?" She answered: "A month ago I felt impressed to speak to her of her soul and of her duty to her Savior, but I postponed it, and now she is gone."

Then turning to the pastor she "I hope you have spoken to her?" He was silent and after a while "I, too, must confess my sin. becoming; how much more interested in frivolous things, I thought I would speak to her of the Spirit, but I postponed it and she has gone." They prayed together for forgiveness.

The answer was: "On her last birthday we remembered that she was not in the Kingdom and said we must speak to her, but other things came up and we neglec ted it, and now she is gone," Christian people, fathers, mothers, teachers and pastors, can God ever forgive us for the way we have been living?

Revolution has come, not from a rusade of the older generation against the ways of youth, but be-cause the Girls' Social Council, of Hackensack High School, has voted a return to moderation.

A set of rules voted by the council and presented to the faculty advisers today gave the teachers a schedule which the girls propose to live up to, and which included these points:

"No more smoking, boisterousness and swearing in public places; moderation in dress; mild and sensible use of cosmetics, banning paint, lipsticks, eyebrow pencils and powder; no more gum chewing; lady-like conduct on the dancefloor;" and finally:

Mr. Fred Ludlow, for many years American Consul to Great Britain, who is also well-known all over that country and the United States as an author, journalist and lec-turer, suffered greatly from indi-gestion and liver troubles just before he left Great Britain for America. Mr. Fred Ludlow.

Soon after arriving in this country to begin his lecture tour he was suffering very severely with his stomach. One of his friends who knew of Dreco recommended this plant and herb remedy to him. The result is explained in the following letter which was sent out from his New York headquarters at 371 West 23rd Street. He writes:

"I deem it my duty to write and acquaint you of my happy experi-ence with your splendid "DRECO" Harbal Bornair Herbal Remedy.

"For many years I was a martyr to indigestion and liver troubles, with bad nervous attacks, and in spite of all the doctors and so-called remedies I tried I was un-able to obtain any relief. Upon my arrival in America, however, a few weeks ago, I was suffering very acutely when I was induced to try your Dreco Herbal Remedy which I am pleased to say brought me speedy and permanent relief.

'Naturally I was overjoyed to know that at last I had discovered the remedy which I had so long been seeking."
